We call your attention to this oil, which we recommend for families, being as white as pure spring water, and perfectly free from smoke, smell, ordour issuing from common oils, and burns longer with ut trimming or or esting the wick than any other.

It is extensively used in Europe (under the brand of Oleophene), where it commands a higher price than any other.

The same can unbestatingly be said of this, the home market, where it has been largely used for mixing with other oils of inferior quality, and by well-known competitive Packers, for the purpose of establishing their brands.

Our DIAMOND BRAND is patented as a Trade Mark, and we, therefore, caution dealers against using the cause or cases for repacking inferior oils. We repeat our guarantee as to the quality, and we challenge comparison with any other oil, as we know the Diamond to be the best.

Shepherd Emith, general manager of the Bank of New South Wales, aworn and examined by Mr. Bradley: Our bank had dealings with insolvent last year; I am informed that we received on 24th February bills of lading for four cases of merchandise, said to represent elastic webbing, shipped by W. Burns to Chisholm and Co.; we advanced to insolvent on these bills of lading on the day on which they were received and afterwards; the advance was not specific on these particular goods, but the goods formed a portion of larger security than that represented by those bills of lading and lodged with us at the same time, and inthe aggregate larger advances were made than the goods altogether realised on sale; insolvent had an overdrast of censiderable amount, everdue engagements, and bills and liabilities maturing, which we declined to pay without farther security; if was not, I think, usual to take a fresh paper from insolvent for every fresh parcel of goods he lodged with us; the invoice value of the webbing was £256 lbs. 10d., and on the 26th May it was sold for £160; this was a shipment by the Clarm; I have no record of any shipment by the Falcon.

A TIME of electioneering is the best of all times to get an insight into the customary tone of political ideas and political morality. A of political ideas and political morality. A straw shows which way the stream runs, and there are a good many straws floating about whenever an election is going on. The remarks made on the hustings and at the meetings of the candidates, and the electioneer ing squibs of all sorts which are generally designed by electioneering agents who have had large practice in their particular art, and who know, from talking with the electors, what is the current sentiment, may be taken as very fair indications of the feelings that are prevalent. Those who study these phenomena car not fail to notice how prominent a part is played in the choice of a candidate by the consideration of the extent to which he can benefit the particular electorate out of the public purse. Any man who, whether from his happy knack of besieging Ministers, or from his social position and supposed influence, is likely to get a considerable grant, is pretty sure on that ground, if on no other, to be popular; and there are very few constituencies who limit their wishes to what is absolutely just, or who would be content with an absolutely impartial division of the public money. The selfshness of the individual certainly is not diminished when the individual is multiplied into a community. And every consideration of the extent to which he can is multiplied into a community. And every what is a little more than fair. It will b observed too that a Minister seeking election or observed too that a minister seeking election or re-election is pressed by his friends on the favourable regard of the constituency, on the ground that he is more likely in his capacity as Minister to get the much desired boons. The honour of having a Minister is not counted for much; but the convenience of heirs, befriended in the the convenience of being befriended in the Executive, by one who can talk over the distribution of money with his colleagues, over merely having a member of that larger com-mittee which is called the Parliament is very distinctly appreciated. It is becoming there distinctly appreciated. It is becoming the second of the fore part of our political system to prefer one candidate to another on the ground of his ability to get a large share of the public money for his district, and also for the same reason to prefer a Minister to an ordinary member.

Yet, while all this is openly avowed and acted upon, and while no constituency considers itself under any obligations to be more highminded, or moral, or unselfish than its neigh himself is expected to be singularly free from the operation of selfish motives. Whenever opponents wish to find a weak joint in the armour of the man they are attacking, one of the first things they look out for is to see if he has not some selfish object in getting into Parliament, or getting into the Ministry. Thus at the late election we see both sides have vigorously used this weapon. On the one hand a contractor is accused of a desire for working the oracle so as to get fat contracts for himself or his friends, and on the other Minister is accused of seeking and taking position for which his numerous private engagements render him disqualified, inasmuch as it would give him opportunities to benefit s friends or injure his enemies.

The inference from this would be that candidates consider it a disability in a public man to be identified with private business that can in any way be connected with public affairs, that it is absolutely impossible for us to choose our politicians out of man entirely secluded from the passing interests of the day. We cannot get a set of closet philosophers, of abstract theorists, or of Platonic politicians. We must take active working men of the world. Husbands, fathers, brothers, cousins, partners in business, shareholders in companies, merchants, squatters, manufacturers. We must take whatever comes best to our hands, and judge of the men by their intrinsic qualities, and not by the degree of their identification with money-making pursuits. In submitting to this inevitable dis-We must take whatever comes best to our hands, and judge of the men by their intrinsic qualities, and not by the degree of their identification with money-making pursuits. In submitting to this inevitable disposition we of course have to guard in the best way we can against any abuse of political power. Good men will not turn to private uses what is a public trust, but bad men will, especially if they think that they bad men will, especially if they think that they will not be detected. The only real security we can get is in raising the tone of public opinion—in making it to be thought base for man to profess zeal for the country, whe a man to profess zeal for the country, when his real object is zeal for himself—and in giving honour to those who have, so far as we can see, proved their uprightness and their honesty, and are fit to be trusted.

But then come the questions, How are constituencies to expect to be served by men constituencies to expect to be served by men of this stamp, if they themselves put forward in the very front of their requirements demands which are merely the expressions of their personal interests? What right have they to personal interests? What right have they ask for pure self-denial, for judicial impartiality, and for abnegation of self on the part of when they avowedly choose their member, when they avowedly choose him on the ground that he is the best man to subserve their selfish interests? How can the average standard of public morality with candidates be high if the average standard of public morality with the constituencies is low? How are we to expect individual men to be above sordid considerations when the masses of men grouped in the electorates distinctly avow them as their ruling motive? And so we come round to our original starting-point—that it is a political misfortune for us to have so many hings done by the central Government for Treasury to have so much to give away, and for local self-government to have so little to do.

Tur limitation of the supply of produce from the land in England requires a review of the circumstances under which production takes piace Everybody has a theory respecting the cause. According to some there are too many pables-according to others too little pro vidence. Some suppose the rate of interest to be at fault; others consider that supply never will overtake population until every man has his bit of garden, vegetable and flower, and his house upon it. In the opinion of many persons the law of primogeniture is to blame; but the most blame, in the estimation of those who know best about the subject rests with the system of farm tenancy. Our readers are generally aware that the land in the mother country is in the hands of but few proprietors, and that the great bulk of the farmers occupy it as yearly tenants, or tenants for a longer period. This mode of leasing land originated in feudal times—the magnates of and where a system of tenant right has grown up to be "a custom of the country," and has the force of law. Under this equitable system the outgoing tenant has the right to claim for improvements he has made, and arbitrators have seldom any difficulty in settling their differences. In consequence of this arrangement the farms are kept at their best throughout the entire term of the occupant's lease; there being no temptation to exhaust the land before leaving it.

Last year a Tenant Right Bill was laid before Parliament, but, owing to the illness of the principal mover in the matter, it got no way. During the next session, however, the agricul-During the next session, however, the agricul-turist community confidently believe that it will become law, and look with great hope to the time when they will stand for the first time on an equality with their landlords—capital being considered as important to the land as the land to the capital.

There are circumstances here in connection with leased land that might be much improved by a simple tenant-right law. The want of a lease is felt; but if the tenant could feel security in realizing his unexhausted improve-ment, the lease might be dispensed with. The ment, the lease might be dispensed with. The landlords do not appear to speak cheeringly of the results of letting land; but it is more than possible that under a better system they would find a better class of men applying for cleared lands conveniently situated in old the mother country is in the hands of but few proprietors, and that the great bulk of the farmers occupy it as yearly tenants, or tenants for a longer period. This mode of leasing land originated in feudal times—the magnates of the State held large estates from the Crown on certain terms; the service rendered by them in times of war was probably equivalent to the value of the land conferred; but when peace folded her wings over the country, the rent became a nominal recognition of the owners' right—sometimes the payment of a barleycorn upon a certain day, the land being underlet to retained the service of the serv Section of the actual consumption of food by the internal consumption of the actual consumption of food by the internal consumption of food the internal consumption of food in the consumption of food the internal consumption of food in the internal consumption of food the internal consumption of food in the internal consumption which as had represented to this case Mr. Block was assisted by Mr. R. Practically, Mr. Black a propositions have received the approval of the whole of those gentlemen, and the necessary alterations in the by-laws for giving effect to his suggestions, were submitted for the approval of the members at a special meeting at Sydney, on Tuesday, the 26th August. In order to place all the information they themselves had at the disposal of the numbers, the directors of the society issued a book of some 180 pages setting forth the proposed evised by-laws, the case authmitted to the actuaries, their joint and individual reports thereon, with a latter from Mr. Hardy, and the report of Mr. Black. Some idea of the importance of the questions discussed may be gathered from the fact that the separate opinion of Mr. Sprague occupies wenty-two pages. The honost enterprise of the Board in neutring so large an expense as this step must have involved in deserving of the most hearty recognition. It is prost that they are not more alive to the weighty reportability attaching to their position than capable of bearing it to the advantage of their constituents. MERTING OF HACKNEY CARRIAGE AND CAB PROPRIETORS AND DIVERS.—A meeting of the above was held, yesterday evening, in the old Oddfellows' Hall, Samex-street. About 100 were in attendance. The chair was occupied by Mr. Corkran. Before the proceedings of the meeting had opened a subscription list was brought forward and largely signed. It was to collect monsy to defrey the legal expenses of a cobman, named Smith, who had recently been fined for charging is. 6d., which the meeting held was no more than he had been entitled to charge. The chairman called the attention of the meeting held was no more than he had been prepared, and which they wished to have sanctioned by the Commissioners for the regulation of public whiches. As you have had so much about the Exhibition in the newspapers (besides letters from A. H., and another correspondent), I do not think we can tell you anything new, but, as promised, I will write a few words to you about that great sicht.

OCTOBER 14TH.—Before giving you a short account of the Exhibition perhaps it may interest you to have some idea of the city. The old city of Vienna is encircled by broad Boulevards or Rings, and the Franz Joseph Quai. These consist of broad centre carriage roads, having on either side footpaths, each bordered by trees. First is the Schötteas Ring, in which are situated some of the largest new hotels; and the Franzens Ring, on one aide of which is Parliament House, the University, and newly laidout grounds connected with them. The Burg Ring comes next, having on the right the Museum and grounds, and on the left the Volksgarten, a grand square in front of the Royal Palace, and the Hofgarten. This leads to the Opern Ring, where is situated the grand opera house. Then there are other broad streets called "rings," till we come to the Franz Joseph Quai, and are so led back to our starting point at the Schöttess Ring. Thus the city is divided from the suburbs by these grand broad roads in which are the finest buildings of recent construction. A great deal of building is still going on, but what is to be done with the palace-like hotels and houses after this month ends is a question which no doubt concerns deeply those most interested. Although the city, enclosed by the fine broad rings, appears to be the centre of business, the suburbs extend over a large space each way, and in them are some fine shops; and beyond again villa residences may; a seen either from the rail-way or as one drives in either direction. Penetrating to the centre of the business, the suburbs extend over a large space each way, and in them are some fine shops; and beyond again wills residences may; a seen either from the rail-way or as one drives in either direction. Penetrating to the centre of the business, the suburbs extend over a large space way, and in them are some fine shops; and beyond again with sculptured stone, but the interior, though lately restored, has rather a sombre light. Restoration is still being proceeded with on the exterio THE VIENNA EXHIBITION. Actionation and the state of the workmen, and, although merely temporary constructions, are likely to remain some years to come. The roof is covered with tiles of various colours, but whether to admire or dislike depends upon the observer's taste. We went one afternoon to Schönbrunn, about an hour's driver from the Hotel Austria, through one of the large suburbs. It is an imperial chateau on the Wien—a river which flows into the Danube. Great care seems to be taken of the little Wien; its breadth may be ten to fifteen feet wide; the banks are kept very neatly, and it has a bridge across it with span enough for a river of greater magnitude. There is nothing very remarkable in the architecture of the chateau. It is a broad white building, five stories high, and imposing looking from the bridge, approaching from the main road. Passing beneath the arches under the chateau we come into the large garden, in which are well-kept flower beds; avenues leading from the large parterre, and many statues ornamenting the grounds. The gardens and grounds here are kept in the French 18th century style and very like, but, in a small degree, the grounds at Versailles. There are fountains, with Neptune and other sea representatives. Some distance above the parterre, and on an eminence, stands the Cloriette, a stone structure from which a grand panorama of Vienna is obtained, and where we studied for a time the locality of places of interest. Connected with the gardens at Schönbrunn is the neatest and best kept menagerie we have seen, although the collection of animals is small compared to that of the London Zoological Society or Jardin des Phantes. Leading from the gardens of Schönbrunn is the village of Hietzung, which is very pretty, consisting principally of villas and pleasure grounds. Here is the Neue Welt, a great resort for pleasure-seekers, and where go dbands play to beer-drinking and tobacco-consuming audiences,—and also to the fairer part of Austrian humanity, who like to sip their chocolate or coffee while heading of t

There are asso a number of etchings and sketches by Rembrandt and others, which are of great interest to Art students.

After a hard day's work at the Exhibition, a visitor to Vienna is glad of a little light recreation, and this may be had in a quiet way at the Volksgarten, just a moderate walk from the hotel. A certain part of this large garden is enclosed with light railing and nettlag to exclude those unwilling to pay an admission fee. Within the enclosure is a large paylion, fitted up like an open-air cate, in front of which is a raised covered dais for one band; opposite is another band paylion; and, a short distance off a place for the third band. The garden is well lighted up, showing the brilliant flowers on the ribbompattern beds. Amongst the promenaders and those seated at the little tables were officers in their gay uniforms, and these, with well-dressed ladies and gentlemen, formed the thronged audience. Waiters were busy handing the copious glasses of Vienna beer and beverages of a lighter character. Strauss's stringed band has a name which has apread beyond Europe, and it well deserves it. More enchanting music of the kind, those who delight in it most could not wish to hear; and if graceful movement and gesticulations in conducting give evidence of talent, truly Herr Strauss deserves a full meed of praise. He was not reluctant to repeat again the music which drew forth applause. The waltz called "The Blue Danube," so familiar to the Viennese, required a third repetition before the conductor was allowed to retire, and the music to be taken up by the other bands, which played with a perfection seldom surpassed out of Austria. This amusement lasted till 10 o'clock, when the signal was given for closing. A bierhalle in Vienna is worth looking into for a short time. We went, or rather were taken, to one. On entering there are a few kreutzers to pay for admission. The place is like a large cellar, and there are tables, around which were seated men and a few women. Everybody draw beer, and the room was

The way to the great Exhibition from the city is across the bridge over the Danau Canal, up the Prater Strass, at the top of which is a large circular open space, called Prater Stern. From this five roads lead. The Haupt Allee,—a broad drive through a park, with cafés and restaurants on one side—leads to the main entrance of the Exhibition. Entering the gates, we had a perfect view of the exterior of the building, which the illustrated papers have very faithfully given. The great defect of the external appearance is that the dome of the rotunda is not of very graceful form. The first impression on entering is not perfectly clear; so that it was necessary to take a little time before setting regularly to work to devote the few days we had to see through the departments. The official catalogue, being five inches thick, we at once gave up the idea of taking it and viewing the objects scriatim as there set down; and thus, without any other guide than the plan of departments, we commenced with the court of the country. The Austrian court begins at the front door, takes up half the rotunda and the greater part of the castern wing. What a list you would have to read if all we here saw and admired were put down—leather work, such as albums, desks, pocket-books, made up in a manner that seemed more beautiful than useful; and high works of art on porcelain, let into the covers of albums, &c., giving them a costliness beyond the reach of ordinary buyers. The Vienna glass is well known, and a brilliant display took up a large share of space. Every possible use that glass can be put to was shown here, and some of the table glass was very beautiful. Fabrics and furniture of all kinds, and jewellery enough to dazzle the most extravagant admirers—and how attractive was the case of diamonds and emeralds! Then, too, there were the plate, clocks in fancy and carved wood. Musical instruments were also here well represented and the pianos were indeed good. The photographs deservedly attracted much notice, as well as scientific inst Musical instruments were also here well represented, and the pianos were indeed good. The photographs deservedly attracted much notice, as well as scientific instruments of all kinds. Then there were all kinds of fabrics and beautiful embroidery, and numbers of cases of meetschaum pipes, in great varieties of design. In the rotunda are a number of trophies constructed of different materials, such as stearine candles. One trophy was represented in glycerine, and was surmounted by a bust of the manufacturer of the article. The design might have possibly have been taken from Pere la Chaise, being similar to the monuments in that resting-place. Under the rotunda, too, besides a very beautiful fountain, which cooled the air by its frequent sprays, were organs and two very good models of the Galleria Victor Emanuelle in Milan, and the Bourse in Brussels. There were also refreshment stalls; at one of which were several of the blackest negroes, speaking perfect American-English. At the extremity of the east wing were the courts of Hungary, Turkey, Russia, China, and Japan all containing produce and manufactures peculiar to the different countries. The Russian department was very interesting, and remarkable for manufactures in iron, from the raw ore to the nicest of instruments, especially surgical; and here, too, were guns, ambulances, and a perfect surgical camp equipage, with all its requirements. In the department just named were life-sized figures, showing the costumes peculiar to the countries. Chose by the western side of the rotunds stands a large case of articles in Russia leather, and nota few were disappointed when told none were for sale, but were to be returned to St. Petersburg. Now taking the western wing, and the northern half of the rotunda, we began with Germany, and what a display of beautiful designs and workmanship; together with scientific instruments of the most perfect kind. Belgium was represented principally in fabrics and manufactures in iron work. Denmark presented a most attractive exhibitio light; while the child Moses expresses an intelligence giving promise of his future greatness. Here the artist seems not to have forgotten one character in pourtraying the other. A group of bubble blowers was remarked upon as being sood, and so were several statues of children in various attitudes. Michael Angelo as a youth cutting out of marble the head of a Faun was amongst the many works that attracted visitors. There are many others here, however, perhaps, of greater merit. Entering the department to the left were four good busts of the Seasons, and on from them were the products and manufactures of Italy; each principal city being there represented with its work. There were raw and manufactured sitis, a grand collection of beautiful marble and mosaics from Rome and from Florence, Switzerland has a small court full of carved woods, clocks, watches, instruments, linen fabrics, de. France has a good space, containing most attractive exhibits — gorgeous upholstery and furniture, wall-papers and damasks, plate, bronze, and clocks, jewellery, fine chima and porcelain. Many hours might be spent in the French court, and yet it is ead France is but poorly represented. The show from Great Britain was inferior in quantity to the other great nations, but in quality in many respects superior. Elkington and Co., of Birmingham, surpassed all damasks, plate, bronze, and clocks, jewellery, fine chima and porcelain. Many hours might be spent in the French court, and yet it is said France is but poorly represented. The show from Great Britain was inferior in quantity to the other great nations, but in quality in many respects superior. Elkington and Co., of Birmingham, surpassed all exhibitors of plate, and for china and glass the English seemed to us beyond all others in quality and beauty of design. A great deal of jewellery was shown by Hancock and Co., of London, and amongst other jewels were the chimal seemed to us beyond all others in all the exhibits in the great building, but he came to a case with over 200 shirt bosoms, and he did shirk examining the embroidery of each one of the chimal carriers. English seemed to us beyond all others in quality and beauty of design. A great deal of jewellery was shown by Hancock and Co., of London, and amongst other jewels were the diamonds, earrings, necklace, and solitaire once owned by the ex-Empress Eugenie; their value was put down at one million guidens. The Dudley jewels were also on view here. Sir William Armstrong and Co. have a small compartment leading out of the British court in which are specimens of armour-plate 12 inches thick, for ships, 7-inch breech-loading rified guns and muzike-loaders; the Gatling or mitrailleurs, as manufactured for the British navy, with self-acting and variable and horizontal movement for spreading the fire; a great gun 33,564 bls. weight, with 9.27 iach bore, with perfect mechanical and sighting apparatus; shot and fusees; railway iron, and specimens of wrought and east iron. The department of the United States scarcely so well represented the American nation as one might have expected, although interesting as far as it went. This, and Brazil, finished the western wing, excepting a court for India and the British colonies. As far as the Australian colonies are concerned it may be safely said that neither of them was fairly represented, either in raw produce or manufactures. If New South Wales had intended to exclude herself, she was wise not to be present rather than to present so poor a show as those of her sister colonies. In the courts of the principal nations of Europe and the United States the methods of teaching and elementary education were illustrated by books and other appliances. There were model schools, &c. And besides this, the progress of the higher branches of study was shown; so that a course from the first step could be traced. Out-buildings between the great building and the machinery department are appropriated to Krupp, where the great Prussian gun stands, and a ponderous piece of artillery it is, and there is the mechanism to move it about, to sight and level, &c. Then there are smaller guns and shot and sh house not far from the British Court, and behind this was Cook's Tourists' Office. Passing through this miscellaneous group of pavilions and outcourts we come to the Machinery Hall, where are machines of various kinds from all the great nations. The locomotives, tenders, and railway carriages of the Austrian Court were fine specimens of workmanship. From end to end of the great half machinery for nearly all purposes was represented, excepting for agriculture, and this had another building to itself. There were ponderous steam hammers, machinery for the manufacture of iron, looms and spinning-machines, printing presses and lithographic presses, but none equal to those to be seen in London in practical work. That rock-borer we saw in operation was talked about by friends interested in gold-quartz-mining in Sydney. To go through the machine hall and do it justice and profit by the time spent would occupy a diligent man say three or four days. Half a day was all that could be spared of our limited time. The Fine Arts court is separated from the east end of the great Industrial Hall by two pretty parterres. In the entrance hall of the Art department is international sculpture, all of which has been exhibited at previous times, the subjects of which are familiar. Three we remarked were "Morning," "Evening," and "the Reading Girl." In the French part there was the last painting of Regnault's—"The Execution at the Alhambra—an engraving of which appeared in the Illustrated News. Although the subject is not a pleasing one, it is a most effective picture. A painting which attracted many round it is called "Spectacle de la Folie Humaine," startlingly life-like. It is not oftea that such an effect is produced as in this picture. The English gallery was specially interesting, as it contained several of the late Sir E. Landseer's best works, some of which were lent by H. M. Queen Victoris. Amongst these is "The Sanctuary." Most people know this by the engraving, but the engraving gives but a faint idea of the panting stag, wh Desert" and "Danger in the Desert." They are of course eastern subjects, the contrast from enjoyment to terror is strikingly marked, the persons represented being the same in these two pictures. The third is "Filial Love," a beautiful picture well worthy the line the artist has written beneath it. "My son, help thy father in his age, and grieve him not as long as he liveth." In the German gallery are several good likenesses of the Emperor, the Crown Prince, Bismark, and other great men of the last war, and many pictures of battle scenes. The Italians sent some good pictures; indeed each nation was well represented in Art. In the Art Court are fifty separate rooms, besides an open gallery within the enclosed space, where sculpture and casts are placed. Thus only a glance could be taken of this great collection of works of Art gathered from all Europe and Great Britsin. You will see that after all we had a hurried run through the courts of the Vienna Exhibition, and left many things unseen. We wanted to see the Infant's Pavilion, where is a grand collection of toys for children of all ages and nations, but when we found it the gong was sounding for closing. A friend said we ought not to have missed that; and so we may be told of many other things we missed. One day we tried lunch at a place called the American Restaurant, not far from the American Court. We were deluded by the name, for the restaurant was the most German of the lowest sort one can imagine. We sat down, gave our order, inhaled the fumes of smoke, the odour of garlic and other m'xtures, and left our lunch paid for, but untouched. How the beer did flow in that crowded pavilion! Not long after we came to the Swedish Restaurant, so called, and found it good in every way, and each day afterwards, while seeing the Exhibition, we devoted half-an-hour in testing the qualities of the fare. At half-past 4 the great bells under the rotunda sound for closing, then outside departments close to the sounding of a gong and foghous. As the people come in all direc to a case with over 200 shirt bosoms, and he did shirk examining the embroidery of each one of the 200, as he thought it might have wasted his time. The first day we spent at the Exhibition it rather surprised us to find so few people there, but on each of the other days multitudes were moving through the building and outer pavilion. The variety of costumes was not so great as might have been anticipated, although we saw many atrangely attired people, said to be from various parts of the neighbouring countries. We are told that the commercial results will fall far short of the anticipations of the projectors; indeed, they fear a great pecuniary loss, there being likely to be a large difference between the cost of construction, the general expenditure, and the receipts by admission of visitors. Cholera had been talked of in the newspapers, and had kept many away from Vienna, but we never heardit mentioned during our ten days' stay there. People say that Exhibitions are overdone, and there should remain some years before another is attempted. This may be the reason that some of the Courts were not so well filled, and that more than one great nation was indifferently represented—particularly the United States; and some regret was expressed that so few of their products, machinery, and manufactures were brought to their department.

THE SACRED CONCERT.

THE SACRED CONCERT.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HEALD.

SIR,—As I always thought all licenses, publican's, public amusements, &c., had an express proviso, forbidding their being opened on Christmas day, how is it, then, that I notice in your paper an advertisement announcing a so-called Secred concert by an opera troupe for Christmas night, at the Victoria Theatre, with the usual prices of admission advertised? Is this lawful or legal?

OURRY. QUERY.

SYDNEY WATER SUPPLY.
TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sin,—Allow me, per medium of your journal, to call the attention of the municipal authorities to the fact of the water from the works being quite salt, and unfit for any domestic purposes, in this part of the suburbs, nearly the whole of yesterday (Sunday).

And I would also remark that the water of late has been much discoloured, and would appear not to have been subjected to the purifying process.

shipments to Australia:—

The clearances during the past statistical month have been 38 in number, aggregating 38,561 tons, of which New Zealand has appropriated no less than 11,035 tone contained in 13 vassels. Export values show a very material augmentation compared with the comparatively low totals which have lately ruded, owing to our columns being now largely influenced by the operations on account of the drapery houses, common at this period of the year, the stoneer shipments of which enter into our current report. Gross total values show an increase of $350,560, being fully 30 per Comparative figures being now $1,217,000 against $199,500. Our New Zealand returns are swelled by the value of raily ay materials which are now going forward freely, and which absorb about 15 per cent of the month's value, for that colony. Matthewson's G. M. Co.—The mining manager, under date 20th December, reports as follows:—"Air-shaft down 76 feet; ground still hard. North stope into cross course, which is here about 45 feet from the shaft, vein looking poor at present. Am still unable to say whether the gold goes beyond the break. besides 40 tons of rough copper, which will be refined forthwith.

The Cercoar Examiner of Saturday, speaking of Brown's Creek Gold Mining Company, anys:—"On Saturday afternoon last a start was made with the crushing plant at this company's works. About six weeks since, we informed our readers of the completion and successful starting of the three engines required to drive the company's batteries, pump water, and haul up the loaded stucks from the mine. At that time the buddles were well in hand, and a start—but only a start—had been made with the erection of the leateries. Mr. Davis, the manager, with Mr. Crowle, his right-hand man, have been indefatigable in their exertions to complete the whole plant by Christmas, and 20 heads of stamps commenced peunding away last Saturday. About a dosen gentlemen from Cercoar were present and they were unanimous in their approval of the completeness of the plant for the purposes intended, and the splendid style in which the whole of the machinery works. Mr. Davis deserves every credit for the expeditious way in which everything has been carried on since he took the sole sharge. To-day it is expected that the remaining ten head of stampers will start, making thirty heads in all. There is no doubt that this plant is the largest and most complete, with all modern appliances, in New South Walse. We shall give a fuller description of the works when they are in full work."

At the last regular monthly parade, Lieutemant Smith stated that it was his intention to resign his commission at the end of the present year. Captain Byrnes, in a short saddress, complimented the members of the company on their general efficiency, and spoke of the regret he and the company would feel at the loss of lieutemant Smith, as services, who, though resigning his commission, still intended to remain an honorary member. After drill, three cheers were given for Lieutemant Smith, and the company marched down George-street to their Lieutemant's residence, headed by the band, playing "Auld Lang Syne." Three cheers, mere were given for Lieutemant Smith, and the company dispersed.

A tea meeting was held in the parochial schoolroom, All Satus' parish, on Friday evening; the object being to clear of the balance of dobt due on the schoelmaster's residence. Tea was commenced at 6.30 pm. The tables were abundantly provided, and were presided over by a number of the ladies of the parish. The room was tasterully hung with flags and Christinas bushes, and the tables ornamented with a profusion of flowers that would have done credit to a flower show. After tex the room was cleared and seats placed for a public meeting, at which the Rev. Canon O'Reilly, Canon H. King, and W. Lumafane delivered addresses on various matters in connection with sabbath and day schools. A choir composed of members of the church sang selections of sacred music at intervals during the evening. The meeting was presided over by the Rev. J. B. Blomfield, who read letters from the Rev. W. J. Gunther and Mr. Palmer, regretting they were not able to be present. The mesting was presided over by the Rev. J. R. Blomfield, who read letters from the Rev. W. J. Gunther and Mr. Palmer, regretting they were not able to be present. NEWCASTLE.

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.]

A VERY interearing gathering took place last Tuesday evening, at the City Hall, to inaugurate the Newcautle Seamen's Mission, and to introduce the missionary to the public. An excellent tea was provided, and well attended. After tea a public meeting was held in the Hall, presided over by Dr. K. Harris, chairman of the mission. Appropriate speeches were made by the Rev. T. J. Pepper (secretary to the mission), Rev. W. Bain, and Rev. J. Coutta, M. A. Apologies were made for the unavoidable absence of Rev. W. K. Piddington (Wesleyan), Rev. J. Dixon (Church of Enzland), and Rev. J. H. Daish (Primitive Methodist), by the secretary. A considerable number of masters of vessels and seamen were present, one particularly, Captain Stafford, of the barque Camille, bringing the whole of his crew with him, and giving a donation of £5 towards the funds. The proceedings were highly interesting, and the new missionary, Mr. Fowler Smith, formerly chief mate of the John Wesley, was very warmly received. The committee have £1600 in hand, and a similar amount is guaranteed; the prospects of the mission are therefore, of an encouraging nature from every point of view.

The loss of the setion between the Borough Council and Mr. Young seems to have had the effect of disturbing the aldermanic lethargy. Some idea may be formed by non-residents of the highly sensational state of the various thoroughtares when it is stated in the working foreman's special report on this subject that there are no less "than saxty-seven dangerous places" in the city; and, by way of climar, the report adds that there is "also an old shaft in the reserve quite caposed, the depth to the water therein heing 20 test." When it is remembered that the greater number of these mustraps are in the darkest localities, the wonder is not that the Councit have occasionally to pay a little bill for damages, but that we consistend the proper adds that there is "also an old shaft in the reserve quite caposed, the depth to the water ther

A deputation, consisting of Dr. Garran, (on behalf of the Associated Colliery masters) and Mr. J. Wood (secretary to the Miners' Association) waited upon the Hon. the Miners' Association waited upon the Hon. the Miners' and the secretary to the Miners' Association waited upon the Hon. the Miners' and the proposed amendments in the new Colliery Bill. Mr. Farnell received the deputation very courteously, and promised to give the disputed points his immediate attention.

An accident happened to the Rev. J. Coutts, M.A., early on Friday morning. He was proceeding to bathe by the seaside when his foot slipped over part of the rock, and he fell. It was at first feared that the hipbone was broken, but an after-examination under chloroform by Dr. Bowker proved that only a small portion of bone of less importance was injured. The rev. gentieman is under the care of Dr. Harris, and is progressing favourably, though still saffering acute pain eccasionally.

Two accidents occurred in the Lambton Colliery on Tuesday last. A quantity of coal fell upon a man assed Henderson, and pushed him down, he was severely bruised, principally about the less and back; the right ankle suffered the most, but Dr. Hill was quickly in attendance, and administered the necessary restoratives; he is now slowly recovering. The other accident happened to a miner named Taylor. The man was filling his skip, when put of a seam that had been left fell upon him, and the skip being in his way he had no room to scape the fall of the rest of the loose coal. He was conveyed home with haste, and Dr. Hill sent for, when he was found to have received severe conversions on the right's houlder and left side, but that no internal injuries had been received. He is progressing afvourably as can be expected.

On Thursday evening, in reply to advertisement, some of the leading storekeepers and drapers in Newcastle met at

On Thursday evening, in reply to advertisement, some of the leading storekeepers and drapers in Newcastle met at the Criterion Hotel to consider the propriety of closing at an earlier hour than hitherto: Mr. R. Ingall in the chair. There was very little unanizality amongst those present, as a feeling seemed to exist with the majority that whatever resolutions were adopted by the present mosting would not be carried out. Two atterksepers maintained that they had always closed at 8 o'clock, and always would; while the others had always kept open till half-past 9. Resolutions were finally passed to the effect that the stores should close at 8 o'clock on four nights in the week, at 1 o'clock the others had always kept open till half-past 9. Resolu-tions were finally passed to the effect that the stores should close at 8 o'clock on four nights in the week, at 1 o'clock on Fridays, and on Saturdays at half-past 10 for the next three months. If this succeeded it was resolved to try and close at seven. A proposition to close at dust all the year round (except on Saturdays), independent of the half-holiday on Friday, was threen out. The meeting then closed.

It will be seen that Singer's Machines ranked in order amongst a lower class. We wish Singer's agent more envisible employment than trying to appropriate the Trophies of the Wheeler and Wilson Company by throwing dust in the eyes of the public.

It has been demonstrated that the Wheeler and Wilson machine will turn out 50 per cent. more work than Singer's, and has double the durability.

THE LITTLE WANZER AGAIN TRIUMPHANT.
The following is a copy of a circular which has just been received by the Agenta, from the Wansa Company per mail steamer Nubia:
THE HIGHEST PREMIUMS awarded at the VIENNA EXHIBITION, 1873, have been gained by
THE LITTLE WANZER
SHUTTLE LOCKSTITCH SEWING-MACHINES.
"These machines which have been awarded the HIGHEST PRIZE MEDALS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD wherever they have competed with any other machines, have reached the climax of superiority at the Vienna Exhibition, where in competed with any other machine, have reached the climax of superiority at the Vienna Exhibition, where in competition with all the shiele Euglish and American machines, they have been awarded the TWO HIGHEST PRIZE MEDALS given to any sewing-machine company or firm in the sewing-machine trade."

In public competition the LITTLE WANZER has never suffered defeat.
In cases where First Prizes were awarded to all meritorious machines; these always stood in the front rank; and where, as in such cases as the great Sydney Exhibition, culy One Prize has been givon, the Little Wanzer has always taken it, and thus has fairly earned the title of the PRIZE MACHINE OF THE WORLD.

In addition to this, in consideration of its extreme simplicity and case of treading, the Little Wanzer has been Sciected for use in the British Public Schools.
